Mr Eisenburg,

In case you didn't catch it, the news brings us reports of another tragic street racing incident in Los Angeles today. Thankfully only three people were killed in this one. I see that downtown San Pedro is on the schedule for the Hot Import Nights event again. Makes me wonder... why is it that you and PBID keep bringing this celebration of street racing cars and culture to downtown San Pedro each year. I am sure you have a very good reason, but I am still waiting for you to explain it to me.

Suspected street racer still at large after fiery crash that killed three

<http://www.latimes.com/local/lanow/la-me-ln-suspected-street-racer-killed-three-20160228-story.html>

Authorities are continuing to search for the driver of one of two vehicles that caused a deadly multi-vehicle crash during a street race on the 5 Freeway near Commerce just after midnight Saturday.

Three people were killed and several others injured after one of the suspected street racers lost control of his vehicle and slammed into a UPS truck, causing the big rig to flip over the median, smash into oncoming traffic and explode. The big rig collided with a gray Nissan, sheared its top off and came to rest atop of a red Ford Explorer.
